TIAPL* Education Association

Conventional education is largely a process that limits the human mind. As such, learning is taken to involve merely the acquisition of skills and the accumulation of knowledge. In this process little occurs beyond a transfer of information from the teacher to the taught, bringing about the conditioning of the mind and a mechanical way of life. At TEA we passionately share the view that the educator, students, parents, and society at large need to go beyond this narrow focus. To go beyond this narrow focus the educator, students and parents need to be part of an expansive journey of inquiry and learning about ourselves, our relationships, our daily lives and the world around us. The central challenge of education, for us, is to bring about an awakening of intelligence to create and sustain this expansive movement of learning, which brings about both academic excellence and excellence in thought, feeling and conduct. Such intent is one which envisages that the educative means are themselves the ends of education. TEA intends to create the learning environments that nurture the fulfillment of this human potential.

Towards unfolding this potential the activities of TEA include: (1) Establishing Teacher Education Centers, Projects, and Workshops (2) Founding of alternative schools (3) Support and development of existing schools (4) TIAPL rejuvenation centers (5) Networking and cooperating with individuals, organizations, projects, research, and resource centers committed to education.

The activities of TEA are intended to be consonant with its TIAPL principles.
